STATE SENATOR SHOCKNEY, of Randolph county, whom the republicans nominated for lieutenant-governor in this city, received a great ovation upon his return to his home at Union City.

THE Ossian News issued an Independence Day souvenir supplement printed in the national colors. It is evidence of enterprise on the part of the publisher which his patrons should appreciate.

THE people's party will hold their national convention at Omaha, next Monday, Fourth of July, and if he will consent to accept Judge Gresham will be nominated for president. If he does accept he may prove quite a factor in the election. Their plan and great hope is by advocating free silver to carry enough electoral votes in the southern and western states to throw the election of a president into the house.

KIND words are being said by the state press in regard to the manner in which Fort Wayne entertained the republican state convention. As an illustration we give the following from the Kendalville Sun: "The experiment of holding a state convention outside of Indianapolis is a success. The Fort Wayne convention was very satisfactory to all concerned and considering the great attendance everybody was well cared for. Fort Wayne people are very hospitable indeed.

THE gubernatorial campaign promises to be the most unique in the history of the state, says the Indianapolis News. "The indications are that it will be a 'go-as-you-please' contest, and it is pretty generally understood that the candidates will go pretty much everywhere in the state between now and the election. There will be no waiting for orders from the state committee to open the campaign, either." You can put it down, Mr. News, that Claude Matthews will win.

HON. A. N. MARTIN, of Bluffton, has been renominated for congress by the democracy of his district. Mr. Martin has been one of the most faithful members of congress during his term and should be returned by a big majority. His unanimous choice to lead the democratic hosts of the Eleventh district, is a great recognition of his worth as a congressman. He has proven himself an able representative of his constituency. Two years ago he was elected by nearly 3,000 and should be returned by an increased majority.

JUNE, the bride's own month, closed yesterday. Presently the statistician will tells us just how many are recorded for the month and how it compares with former months; but what does it matter? Each particular bride thinks that the roses bloom only for her; that the skies do not look quite so blue or the breezes blow quite so softly for any one else; her beloved is a little more perfect, her happiness a trifle greater, her future the least bit brighter. And does not each month belong to the bride who consecrates it for herself by her marriage? June is the favorite because the most beautiful, but "The world is full of beauty when the heart is full of love."

NEXT Monday is America's Independence day. The institution of national holidays in commemoration of great events in which the whole people have figured, is almost without exception, a thing of quite recent times, and belongs in a peculiar sense to republican, or at least, popular governments. Formerly, though holidays might be numerous, they had almost invariably a religious significance. They were saint's days, or church celebrations of some kind. This is still true in most of the monarchial countries of the old world. Even in England almost the only holiday having a national, as distinguished from an ecclesiastical significance, is the birthday of the Queen. The United States was one of the first nations to set the example of creating public holidays which had a direct reference to the people's achievements in their own behalf. Their observance of the Fourth of July dates from its first anniversary, and has never been interrupted since the establishment of the republic.

... C.
... Judge
...es Robinson, of
... the orators.
...te for congress, Mr. Mc-
...made a most magnificent ad-
...and held the large audience in wrapt attention. He said that he was glad to rejoice over the results of the Chicago convention with the democrats of Allen county. Recurring at once to the issues of the campaign he invited a critical comparison of the records of both parties. The democratic party stood for commercial freedom, for honest money, for just taxation, and only through it could the people expect freedom from class legislation, from tyrant tariff laws, and to it honest labor was looking for recognition and reward.

Other speeches were made and fireworks made the night one long to be remembered.

FIRST SEASON ENDED.

The Millers Defeated in the Last Game of the Series.

A word to the wise was sufficient and Uncle Jeremiah sent us a regular day of beauty for the close of the first baseball season. There was quite an attendance and this had much to do toward cheering the home team on to victory. The Millers, flushed with their success of the previous day, came on the ground with a rush that seemed to say: "We have the power of Niagara Falls behind us and we will grind the ex-Pilgrims to dust, but they retired with a large cipher while a quartette of runs adorned the pages of the locals. They lost their nerve and almost allowed the game to go by default. The game was too much one sided to excite much interest. Hits were as numerous as lemonade peddlers at Barnum's circus, while error followed error with the rapidity of the lightning flashes of last week. The principal features of the game were the stick work of the home team, the base running and sliding of Motz and Harrison, and the fielding of Carrol who made the pretties' running catches of the season. Graham, shortstop for the visitors, thought he would do a cute thing when the bases were filled by allowing a little pop up to drop in front of him without attempting to catch it, intending by so doing to make a double, possibly a triple play, but in his excitement the ball rolled away from him and not a man was decapitated. The crowd gave him the laugh la grande, which did not tend to mollify his passion. In fact every trick attempted by the Millers was nipped in the bud and the game was dead easy from start to finish.

The first session is now at an end and while we are not at either end we are nearly so. The new season commences tomorrow and we predict that when it closes the Fort Wayne team will be found way up at the top. They started out in the first part under circumstances discouraging indeed and it was not until the club found a home in this city that they began to do good work, but the day had been too far spent and the race too heated for them to recover lost ground. But now we can expect different reports from them.

Appended are the results of yesterday's Western and National league games:

WERE WELL PLEASED.

The Opinion of an Outside Paper of "Our" Convention.

That our city entertained the delegates to the republican state convention in a truly royal manner, has never for a moment been questioned. Every county paper speaks in praise most high of the reception accorded the visitors. But it remains for the Lafayette Courier, who from the first doubted our ability to care for the crowd, to say the complimentary words found in the following from that valuable exchange:

The experiment of holding a state convention anywhere outside of Indianapolis turned out to be better than was anticipated by many. When it was first proposed to locate the republican convention at Fort Wayne the Courier opposed the new departure quite vigorously. With due regard for Fort Wayne's creditable efforts on this occasion, we feel justified in saying that Lafayette is quite as abundantly prepared for caring for so large a crowd as is the county seat of Allen county, and if the favor is to be passed around we shall make a determined effort to have the next republican state convention located in the handsomest and most progressive city in Indiana, famous for its wealth, its public spirit, and its reputation for hospitality, not to mention the fact that it is now conceded to be the center of civilization. It is not the Courier's purpose to discredit Fort Wayne's hospitality or its generous management of the convention. The people, regardless of politics, combined to extend hearty welcome to all visitors, and although the community is intensely and overwhelmingly democratic, the strangers within the gates were accorded the most courteous and chivalrous consideration on all hands.

Continuing the Courier says: "On the whole the people of Fort Wayne are entitled to credit for their generous and hospitable entertainment of the convention. We trust the result will be to inspire the republicans of Allen county to renewed effort to secure harmony. Their conduct up to this time has been of a character to invite a good deal of adverse criticism, and the Courier has, perhaps, done its full share of it. There is good fighting material in the republican ranks of Allen county, but they should be frequently admonished to cease fighting among themselves and unite in making war upon the common enemy. If the recent republican convention served to forward such a happy condition—if it served to ameliorate the internal strife that had so long prevailed in that section, we are all justified in joining in a song of praise. But a word to the state central committee: Don't do it again."

ST. MARY'S OF THE WOODS.

Diplomas Received at the Close of the Fifty-First Commencement.

The fifty-first annual commencement exercises of St. Mary's of the Woods at Terre Haute, was held yesterday. This institution is the mother home of the Sisters of Providence of the United States and a large number of students from this city attend it. Eight girls received diplomas. The members of the class were: Emilia Hughes, Evansville; Theodora Boucher, St. Louis; Louise B. Alfrey, Crawfordsville; Delia C. Keefe, Kentland; Anna C. Reaume, Indianapolis; Frances B. Spencer. Indianapolis; Josephine Hefron, Washington, and Catherine Ryan, Indianapolis. Interspersed in the program of essays were musical selections on the harp, violin and piano, as well as vocal solos, duets and quartets, the musical education of the St. Mary's being an important feature of the course; so also is art work. The visitors to the beautiful buildings saw a rare display of paintings and fancy needle work.

The Columbia City Commercial says of a young couple of this county: "Rarely have two handsomer people stood upon the velvet Brussels of the Chambers house, or plighted their faith under the hymenial arch, than were Mr. William A. Devault and Miss Mary F. Mayers, both of Churubusco, Ind. The Rev. Dr. Driver officiated, and his excellency, Ira J. Chase, governor of the commonwealth, stood as a witness, and gallantly kissed the lovely bride. Mr. and Mrs. Devault left for Chicago on No. 3, at 2:24 p. m., where they will remain until autumn."

RAILWAYS AND SHOPS.

A Boilermaker's Reminiscences of a Bloody Battle—Local and Personal News.

Today is the twenty-ninth anniversary of the commencement of the three day's battle at Gettysburg, and the death of General John F. Reynolds. Captain Jack Kensill, the genial Pittsburg boilermaker, was also badly wounded in that battle. The captain can relate some interesting and thrilling incidents of that bloody encounter. He was immediately under Reynolds and Doubleday of the "old First corps," and says:

"The old first corps, in the first day's fight, lost more men, killed and wounded, in proportion to the numbers engaged on the first of July, than any other corps in all our army during the war in a single fight. The figures tell with more eloquence than human lips can utter of the stubborness of the the fight. With less than 9,000 men in action, the loss in killed were 593, wounded 3,209, missing 2,222. Many were afterwards found to have been killed or wounded. Total loss, 6,924. It was this awful cost of men under the skilled leadership of the heroic Reynolds until his death, and then of the gallant Doubleday, that enabled Howard, with unerring judgment, to seize and hold Cemetery Hill as the rallying point of the Army of the Potomac."

Division Superintendent E. A. Gould, of the Wabash, with headquarters at Peru, has returned to that city after a pleasant visit with Master Mechanic Frank Morse.

The fifteen-month-old child of Stephen Schallenberger, foreman of the night force of Pittsburg car inspectors, was taken with spasms yesterday afternoon and for an hour its life was despaired of. The child is much better today.

Conductor and Mrs. J. E. Erickson will return home this evening. For the past two weeks they have been doing the Atlantic resorts and a letter from the conductor states that the trip was wonderfully pleasant.

Some startling developments in the brass stealing line will come to light today. A quantity of the metal was recently taken from the Bass works, and arrests will follow. The value of the stolen brass is estimated at $20.

Henry Graff is now engaged in carving some elegant panels for doors at the Rhinesmith & Simonson factory. Mr. Graff is an expert in the carving line and last winter was employed by the Wallace Circus company at Peru.

This morning the blacksmiths and the men in the iron machine department of the Pittsburg shops commenced getting out material for 100 furniture cars. This does not look much like a suspension of operations, as has been falsely reported.

Yesterday J. B. Unser returned from Bellevue, Ohio, and reported for duty at the Nickel Plate round house. Some weeks ago Mr. Unser, who is a fireman, dropped a large piece of coal on his foot, mashing the member badly. During disablement he visited relatives in Bellevue.

Dennis O'Day, of Hadley, was in the city this morning, calling upon his numerous friends. Mr. O'Day took an active part in the construction of the Pittsburg railroad through Allen and Kosciusko counties, and his wealth is the result of his shrewdness in figuring on contracts in early days.

P. W. Baches gladdened the hearts of his old comrades in the Pittsburg boiler shop by making his appearance among them this morning. Mr. Baches is now employed in the Pennsylvania company's shops at Wellsville, Ohio. He says the Fort Wayne colony down there is in good health and spirits.

A dispatch from Youngstown, Ohio, reads: "The new scale presented by the amalgamated association of iron and stele workers is still unsigned by the manufacturers, who declare that they will have nothing to do with it unless the scale is signed. In the meantime all the mills in the Mahoning valley are idle."

The Pennsylvania company is still making improvements in order to handle the world's fair business next year with all possible safety and dispatch. What is known as a "corkscrew siding" has been built at Richey, four miles west of Van Wert. Long sidings and often double tracks are being built all along from Crestline to Chicago.

Indianapolis Journal: "It is highly probable, says one of the passenger officials of the Big Four, that an effort will be made to arrange with the Lake Erie and Western to put on a through coach between Indianapolis and Fort Wayne via Muncie. By this route the distance is 120 miles, which is twelve miles shorter than any other line between the two cities."

Toledo has one of the most prosperous organizations of railway clerks in this country, both as to numbers and in bringing about good results. They meet socially often, have pleasant excursions and are a power in the national organization. This association has prepared a circular, which will be sent to all the associations, suggesting reforms which should be acted on at the coming convention, which meets in Philadelphia in September.

Characteristics of Hood's Sarsaparilla: The largest sale, the most merit, the greatest cures. Try it, and realise its benefits.

Yesterday at St. Mary's catholic church Miss Mary Hecke, of East Washington street, became the bride of Charles Reffelt, Rev. Father Oechtering performing the ceremony. The attendants were Miss May Reffelt and Mr. Ed Perry. After the marriage, the bridal party and a few invited friends partook of a wedding feast at 236 Madison street, the home of the groom. In the evening a reception was held. Mr. and Mrs. Reffelt will go to housekeeping in a very cosy home already prepared for them, on Madison street. The young couple are popularly known and congratulations come thick and fast. The groom is employed at Paul Wolf's establishment.

It Saves the Children.

Mr. C. H. Shawen, Wellsville, Kan., says: "It is with pleasure that I speak of the good Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy has done my family during the last fourteen years. In the most obstinate cases of summer complaint and diarrhœa among my children, it acted as a charm, making it never necessary to call in a physician. I can truthfully say that in my judgement, based on years of experience, there is not a medicine in the market that is its equal. For sale by druggists.

Krause's Headache Capsuls—Warranted.

Read This Letter From a Chicago Lady.

CHICAGO, 735 W. Adams St.,
April, 20, '91.

Mr. Norman Lichty, Des Moines, Ia.:

Dear Sir—A sample of KRAUSE'S HEADACHE CAPSULES was left in my husband's office a few days since, and as I am subject to headaches—neuralgic, nervous, and in fact every other kind—he thoughtfully brought the sample box home. The very next day I had a chance to try them and ONE CAPSULE relieved me in less than half an hour. Next day I was attacked again, took another capsule with the same delightful result, in less than half an hour my head felt as well as ever, with no bad feeling as the after result. I have had these terrible headaches for twenty years, and have tried every remedy I ever heard of, but nothing I have ever taken has cured or relieved me as QUICKLY as KRAUSE'S HEADACHE CAPSULES. MRS. N. A. SKINNER.

"Have I any objections to your printing a portion of my letter? NO! If my testimony will induce any one who suffers with headache to buy your CAPSULES I will be glad."

Yesterday at the Cathedral occurred the marriage of Miss Rose Clark and George Behler. At the appointed hour the bride and groom, accompanied by Miss Martha Clark, sister of the bride, and Peter Behler, brother of the groom, took their place before the altar, where Rev. John Quinlan pronounced the impressive marriage ceremony, assisted by Rev. Father Young, of Garrett. Miss Moran, a cousin of the bride, presided at the organ. After the ceremony the bridal party and invited friends repaired to the home of the bride's mother, on East Jefferson street, where an elegant repast awaited them. Mr. Behler and bride left for Detroit to reside.

Painful Spectacles

the women who try to wash without Pearline. It's hard to look at, but it's harder yet to do it. Washing with Pearline is easy—easy for weak backs, easy on delicate fabrics. It does away with the Rub, Rub, Rub. There is nothing as convenient—nothing so effective. Washing with Pearline is safe; millions know it, and can tell the millions who want to know.

Beware Peddlers and some unscrupulous grocers will tell you, "this is as good as" or "the same as Pearline." IT'S FALSE—Pearline is never peddled, if your grocer sends you an imitation, be honest—send it back. 276 JAMES PYLE, New York.

OUR NEW BATTLE SHIP.

Successful Launching of "The Indiana" at Philadelphia,

Amid Shrieks of Whistles, Ringing of Bells, Cheers of People and Waving of Flags and Handkerchiefs.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Feb. 28.—The great battle ship Indiana was successfully launched at the ship yard of the Wm. Cramp & Sons company this afternoon in the presence of thousands of people, among them the president of the United States, the secretary of the navy, and other members of the cabinet and quite a large delegation of congressmen and others, who arrived from Washington this morning on a special train.

As if anxious to get into her native element, the huge coast defense ship slid down the well greased ways with comparative rapidity and struck the smooth waters of the Delaware river with a force that sent waves high into the air. Then she was towed back to the wharves and in about a year will be ready for services and turned over to the government.

From early morning crowds began to gather around the works and as the day advanced the multitude increased. The river abounded with crafts of every description and almost every boat floated the national colors. The interior of the shipyard presented a scene of activity. Flags were flying from dozens of poles; the cruiser New York and cruiser No. 12, the Columbia, which was launched last July, and other ships were gaily bedecked with flags and bunting, while flags innumerable and other decorations were stretched from the stem to the stern of the Indiana.

The arrival of the presidential party was the signal for loud and continued cheering. The party came from Washington on a special train over the Baltimore and Ohio railroad. Among the visitors were Secretary of the Navy Tracy, Postmaster General Wanamaker, Attorney General Miller and his daughter, Miss Jessie, the fair christener; Senators Voorhees and Turpie, of Indiana, in honor of which state the vessel is named, and others.

The president and the other gentlemen of the party acknowledged the complimentary cheering by smiling and raising their hats. The party then proceeded to where the battle ship lay, and taking positions on a raised platform at the bow, the order was given to "saw the ways." Just as the 4,200 tons of steel started down the incline, Miss Miller broke the customary bottle of champaigne, and said:

"I christen thee Indiana."

Whistles shrieked, bells rang and people cheered and waved handkerchiefs and flags. The "Indiana" is the eighth war ship that the Cramps have launched and is the largest ever sent from their ways.

MOORE'S HILL, Ind., Feb. 28.—It is reliably stated that there are ninety-nine applicants for the postoffice at Aurora.

VALPARAISO, Ind., Feb. 28.—The Hon. Clem J. Kern, member of the last legislature, was arrested yesterday morning on a state warrant, charging him with assault and battery for assaulting Editor Welty, of the Porter County Videte, last Saturday night.

WABASH, Ind., Feb. 28.—Lafontaine will have a bank, with a capital of $12,000, the stock having been subscribed by farmers residing in and around the town. Jehu Banister has been elected president and John Harper vice president. The cashier will be chosen March 11, and will probably be J. G. Harper.

EDINBURG, Ind., Feb. 28.—As a northbound passenger train was pulling out of town, a boy named Stafford hurled an insulator through a coach window, grazing Professor Ralph Jones, of the Edinburg high school, in its flight. The conductor stopped the train and arrested the boy, who was taken to Franklin and released.

WABASH, Ind., Feb. 28.—Mrs. Samuel Jenks, of this city, will suffer the loss of her right hand as a result of a trifling injury sustained December 18, when she ran a comb tooth into her finger. Blood poisoning ensued, and her hand is so inflamed that amputation has been decided upon to save her life.

COLUMBUS, Ind., Feb. 28.—Following the intense excitement of the temperance talk here for some days past over the effort to pass an ordinance removing screens from saloons, the saloonkeepers met and the result was, Sunday was the first dry day Columbus has experienced for many a day.

BRIDGEPORT, Ind., Feb. 28.—Ingling & Mills' store was visited by burglars on Saturday night. The safe was drilled and blown open, and watches and jewelry, valued at $500, were taken, together with a small amount of change.

TOOK MORPHINE PILLS.

Death of a Noted Turfman at New York City.

NEW YORK, Feb. 28—Walter Gratz, of Philadelphia, the well known horse owner, died yesterday afternoon at the hotel Marlborough, in this city. Mr. Gratz had not been in good health for two or three months and had suffered much from insomonia in consequence of which he had acquired a habit of taking morphine pills. These had tended to weaken his naturally strong constitution. Mr. Gratz was only thirty-six years old. He had been prominently connected with the turf for six years. He still owned Elkwood, the horse that won the suburban prize in 1888 and Dry Monopole. His racing speculations had not been financially successful. It is said they cost him from $200,000 to $300,000.

JOHN L. DRUNK AGAIN!

Sullivan Gets on a Glorious Spree at St. Louis.

Makes a Speech to the Audience and the Drama Becomes a Howling Farce Comedy.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Feb. 28.—Since ex-Champion John L. Sullivan arrived here Sunday morning he has experienced one continual round of excitement and hilarity. He has dallied with the "black bottle," as only John L. can dally with it.

It was with considerable difficulty that Sullivan was assisted to dress for the first act when carried into his dressing room after arriving at the theater in a carriage from a merry time with convivial society throughout the afternoon yesterday.

As he reeled on the stage the large audience immediately took in the situation and a general titter was heard all over the house. One man was more expressive than the rest, and gave vent to an ironical laugh. Sullivan scowled savagely at the man, and moved up toward the footlights and addressed the audience as follows before entering upon his lines:

"Ladies and gentlemen: Did you ever see a mug? Well, there's one, (pointing to the man who had given vent to his merriment) He don't know a good thing when he sees it. He thinks I'm drunk. But I'm not. I go on like this just to give the newspapers a chance. That mug is ignorant. I know a little something. I went to school with my father and mother. I learned to spell and read and know things. If that mug comes up here on the stage I'll show him he isn't in it with me."

Here the big fellow stopped, amid wild applause, and attempted to go on with his lines. The thrilling drama soon became a howling farce comedy as John L. substituted here and eliminated there. He was particularly effective in his attention to his leading lady, and his embraces were at times more affectionate than the scene justified.

He delivered several impromptu speeches before the close of the show, saying on one occasion: "You people would like to see me stripped, wouldn't you? Well, I'll fool you. I won't strip tonight."

At the close of the performance John L. resumed his toying with the bottle and at an early hour this morning was gloriously drunk. Yesterday Sullivan was weighed here and tipped the scales at 278 pounds.

A HORRIBLE CRIME.

Two Little Girls Carried to a Lonely Hut

Where They are Assaulted by Three White Fiends—A Mob After the Brutes.

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., Feb. 28.—From Dayton, Tenn., comes a horrible story of outrage upon two little girls. A reputable farmer named Corley reported Sunday that his two little girls were missing. Search was made and the children were found yesterday morning in a cabin near the mountains half dead from starvation, exposure and outrage. They stated that while at the railway station, intending to go to Rathburn, Tenn., with money which their father had given them, three men came in and picked them up and carried them away to the old hut where they were afterwards found. The men, who were white, were recognized by their victims as John Godsey, Green Prior and J. P. Cates. They outraged their captives and robbed them of their money. A posse is hunting for the trio and if they are captured they will certainly be lynched.

IN ANNUAL CONVENTION.

The National Electric Light Association Meets in St. Louis.

ST. LOUIS, Feb. 28.—Nearly 500 delegates, many of them accompanied by ladies, reached here on special trains last night and this morning to participate in the sixteenth annual convention of the National Electric Light association. At 11 o'clock the convention was called to order by President James I. Ayer, of this city, in the Telephone building, corner Olive and Tenth streets. Mayor E. A. Noonan delivered an address of welcome. President Ayer followed with the opening address to the convention. The address was quite lengthy and devoted chiefly to statistics on electric light plants and power stations, their cost and equipment. At the conclusion of President Ayer's address B. E. Sunny, chairman of the committee on exhibits at the world's fair, made his report. The report shows that an exhibit will be made surpassing all previous exhibitions of this character. The convention at noon took a recess until 2 p. m.

FLOURING MILLS BURNED.

DEATH IN THE WINDS!

The Walls of a Burned Business Building Topple Over

Falling Onto Two Dwellings—Eight Persons Killed in Their Sleep and Others Injured.

CHICAGO, Feb. 28.—By the falling of the walls of John York's new dry goods store at Halsted and Ninteenth streets at 1:30 o'clock this morning seven, and perhaps eight, people were instantly killed and four others seriously injured. The killed are: John Smith, forty-five years; Dollie Smith, aged thirteen years; Baby Smith, nine years; Hattie Smith, four years; Pauline Reutich, nineteen years; F. Kunze, forty-eight years; Mrs. Mary Kunze, forty-five years. The injured: F. Kunze, jr.; Patrol Sergeant Loughran; Mrs. Amelia Smith, probably fatal; Police Officer William Smith. Missing: — Joseph, bartender, aged twenty-seven years.

The catastrophe was caused by the collapsing before the high wind of the walls of the burned York building. These had been standing since the fire which last winter destroyed the store and contents. At this time the walls were soaked with water, which, however, coated them with ice and aided in holding them together. It was feared that a change of temperature would weaken the walls by thawing out the ice which held them together, and last night this fear was realized.

Yesterday's warmth and rain melted the ice and last night's wind shook the tottering walls until they fell with a crash, burying two houses with their sleeping inmates.

The two houses destroyed were the saloon of John Smith, at 761 Halstead street, and the jewelry store of A. Kunze, at 763 Halstead street. Both were frame structures and both were occupied on the second stories by the families of the owners of the places of business below.

That all in the buildings were not killed seems almost a miracle, but while two were taken out alive one of them, Mrs. Carrie Smith, wife of the saloon keeper, can scarcely survive the day. The other one to escape was Fred Kunze, son of the jeweler, aged twenty-one years. He, with his bed, was carried through the floor to the basement. A door was thrown across the bed and supporting a great wall served to save the occupant of the bed from injury by the falling debris. Young Kunze was rescued but slightly injured.

The work of rescuing the imprisoned people, aside from the great danger to the firemen, was attended with great difficulty. It was unknown in what portion of the buildings the missing families had been sleeping and the firemen, who were on the spot almost before the sound of the crash had died away, were without any guide in their work save their own instinct. Disregarding the smoke and the licking tongues of flame that appeared, spreading amid the debris, they dug along the base of the York wall, at a point which appeared to be about the center of Kunze's jewelry store.

Their search was finally rewarded by a shout from beneath the bricks and broken timbers. They dug steadily on, but could not locate the voice. At last, however, came the cry: "Here I am," and at the same instant a hand was thrust through to the open air. It was the hand of young Kunze. His rescue was then but a matter of a few minutes. After being rescued he told the firemen where his father and mother had been sleeping and he was then removed to the county hospital.

The fate of Smith's bar tender, whose full name is unknown, is a mystery. He occupied a room on the second story of the Smith house, but as his bed, when found in the ruins, showed no trace of having been occupied, it is thought he may not have been at home at the time of the catastrophe. Superintendent of Streets Burke put 150 men at work on the ruins early this morning. The work of excavation is difficult, owing to the heat and smoke that still ascend from the debris, and it is absolutely impossible that any of those buried in the debris can be still alive.

It was shortly after 1:30 when the wall fell. Policeman Hanks was near the corner of Halstead and Nineteenth streets when the disaster occurred. He hurried to the spot, and could hear the groans and cries for help of the people buried in the ruins. He sent in an alarm of fire, for, to add to the horror of the scene, smoke was seen curling up through the ruins, which had caught fire from a stove overturned in the crash. The fire department arrived in a few minutes and began playing on the debris.

Sergeant Loughran, of the Canal and Port avenue station, had in the meantime arrived and begun the work of rescue. While near the center of the ruins a crash came and the sergeant was struck in the back by the falling brick and thrown down on the burning rubbish. As he was struggling to his feet another brick struck him on the right hand, crushing that member. At this time Patrolman Smith was also struck and knocked down by flying rubbish.

Mrs. Amelia Smith was the first of the victims found. She was lying beneath a section of the wall which was still held together by mortar, and it was fifteen minutes after her first cry was heard before she was rescued. She was then unconscious. It was thought at the time that she could live but a few minutes, but much to the surprise of the physicians at the county hospital, she was still alive this morning.

The hopes that the bartender, George Mesterle, as his name was learned to be today, might be still alive, was dissipated this forenoon, when his body, terribly mutilated, was taken from the ruins. The body was taken to the morgue.

At 11 o'clock the police gave out the following list of the killed and injured, which is believed to be the correct one. The killed: William Kunze, Mrs. Mary Kunze, John Smith—or Schmidt—, Lizzie Smith, Hattie Smith, Paulina Mortina, George Mesterle. The injured: Mrs. Smith, Annie Smith and Fred Kunze.

GOVERNOR MATTHEWS

Has Forty Offices to Give Away in the Next Two Weeks.

He Will Make His Appointments and Then Take a Two Weeks' Trip to Florida.

The pressure to obtain an audience with the governor becomes greater as the last days of the general assembly draw near. Throughout the session he has been a much sought-after man. Not only have the members of the legislature been in frequent communication with him, but the incoming of a national administration has caused a clamor from a hungry horde of office-seekers who desire appointments, both large and small, in the federal government and who seek the governor for letters of indorsement. To this multitude, says the Indianapolis News, he has given an attentive ear, and much care has been necessary not to indorse two men for the same position. Besides the legislator and office seeker, the governor has had a large number of admirers from over the state who have taken much of his time with short, friendly visits. The pardon-seeker has had his mission ended temporarily by a refusal from the executive to receive any of them until the legislature is over.

The governor begins his day's work at about 8 o'clock, and the state and political matters brought before him engross his attention until far into the night. He has been constantly on the move since a few weeks before the state convention was held which nominated him for governor nearly a year ago, and had his physical strength been less than it is he would doubtless have succumbed.

They who call at the executive department to obtain audience with Governor Matthews must exercise as much patience as a man awaiting his turn at a barber shop. There is a private secretary and a clerk in the office to dispose of an ordinary visitor, but those who are asking for attention now are out of the ordinary, and nothing less than "a few minutes of private conversation with the governor" will satisfy them.

Much time is given to discussing the appointments that have been intrusted to the governor, and as the time is now ripe for filling the vacancies the pressure becomes greater. The only appointments that will have to have the confirmation of the senate will be two trustees for the reform school for boys and one for the female reformatory. These will be sent to the senate this week. It is understood that Miss Laura Ream will be appointed to succeed herself as trustee at the female reformatory. George F. McGinnis (republican), incumbent at Plainfield, is under consideration for reappointment.

Next week the appointments to the state penal and benevolent institutions will be made. There will be two trustees appointed on each board. The governor will within the next two weeks have about forty offices to fill. Under each of them also comes three times as many appointments which the appointees will have to make. By the time all the commissions expire the governor will have about 200 positions to give out during his term. Besides those already mentioned, two members of the board of state charities and two on the state board of health will be made next week. These appointments are the chief ones, but each anticipates a small army of subordinates, except on the charity board.

The governor has been subjected to great physical and mental strain for months, but he does not show its effects in his personal appearance. He has a vacation under consideration, which will probably begin a week after the legislature adjourns. Should his plans be decided upon he will leave for St. Louis, and from that point he will go to New Orleans by boat. From there the trip will extend to St. Augustine, Fla., the real objective point, and the return home will be made by another route. It is proposed to have the trip occupy two weeks. Mrs. Matthews will accompany him.

FLORIDA'S SENATOR.

Samuel Pasco Appointed to Fill a Vacancy.

TALAHASSE, Fla., Feb. 28.—Governor Mitchell has appointed Samuel Pasco to be United States senator for Florida ad interim, beginning March 4, and ending with the election of Pasco's successor by the legislature, which meets in April. His commission has been signed and is now in his possession at Washington, although the vacancy does not actually occur until next Saturday.

DOES GOOD WORK.

The Indiana House Defeats the Haggard Gas Bill.

The Feeble Minded School—The Apportionment Bill—Other Important Legislative Matters.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Feb. 28.—The Haggard gas bill will cause no more discussion in this general assembly. It was killed by a decisive vote just before the house adjourned last evening. The work was done in the interest of the gas consumers of the natural gas territory. The bill was plainly in the interest of the corporations controlling the territory.

The house passed the Fort Wayne and Evansville charters yesterday afternoon. There was little opposition to either of them. The first was opposed by Representative Montoux, of Vanderburg county. The Fort Wayne charter was opposed on the floor by Representative Hench, of Allen county.

The democrats of the two houses of the general assembly in caucus last night agreed on an apportionment bill. It was in session two hours. There were four bills offered for consideration, one by Representative Ader, another by Senator Fulk, one by Senator Kennedy and one by Senator Stuart. All were read. Senator Fulk's bill is substantially the same as the law of 1891, but it is insisted by some that under its provisions former adjudication cannot be pleaded. Senator Kern is of this opinion, while others believe that it contains similar objectionable features to the law of 1891. It is claimed that it does not follow the recent decision of the supreme court and that in its provisions the contiguity of counties is not preserved as the court has decided it should be. Mr. Ader's bill preserves the contiguity of the counties and strictly adheres to the court's decision. The only change in the bill adopted is that it abolishes the representative district of Dubois and Martin, which had one representative, and makes a district of Dubois, Martin, Orange and Lawrence, and gives them two. It gives Jay, Adams and Blackford two representatives, and Wells county, which only cast 4,921 votes in the last election, or 589 less than the unit, is given a representative by itself. In the senatorial apportionment Noble and Whitley are thrown together, instead of Whitley and Allen, as heretofore, and Dekalb and Allen are made a district instead of Noble and Dekalb. It is very probable that the bill will be greatly changed before it is passed.

The bill appropriating $55,000 to the state soldiers' home to be created at Lafayette, passed the house yesterday by a vote of 64 to 25.

The committee on courts in the senate has recommended the adoption of Senator Newby's bill providing for the appointment of justices of the peace. The committee recommended the indefinite postponement of Senator Stuart's bill fixing the salaries of circuit and superior judges; Senator Loveland's bill to create a new judicial circuit and provide for the election of a prosecutor in the Thirty-ninth judicial district. The report was adopted.

There will be two reports from the special committee appointed to consider the Haggard natural gas bill. Representative Farlow will recommend that the bill be indefinitely postponed. Representatives Erwin and Ader will recommend the passage of a substitute bill, which they believe will cover the ground.

Senator Morgan secured a victory in the senate yesterday afternoon. His bill appropriating $110,000 for additional buildings to the feeble minded school was favorably reported and the finance committee instructed to insert the Morgan bill in the house appropriation bill when it comes over.

The session of the legislature is drawing to a close. After today there will be five more days. As the end approaches business is driven through with dispatch. The "play" is becoming fast and furious. The apportionment bills have been prepared and the appropriation bill is under discussion. Gas and car legislation is pending and many measures are clamoring for a hearing.

When the senate assembled yesterday afternoon Senator Sweeney moved to suspend the rules and pass house bill 346 introduced by Representative Wilson, authorizing incorporated towns to construct electric light plants. The bill passed.

Michael Cain was re-elected chief engineer of the state house by the house and senate in joint session. The republicans did not nominate a candidate, and on motion of Senator Newby (republican,) Mr. Cain (democrat) was made the unanimous choice of the general assembly.

Senator Wishard's apportionment bill has been revised and will be presented in both houses. There are a few changes in it since it was printed, but in the main it is substantially the same bill.

The house yesterday considered bills on engrossment. Representative Barnes' bill to amend the tax law so as to allow persons to set off indebtedness against land, failed of engrossment. Representative Lindemuth's bill, providing that judges in granting divorces shall order that, for certain causes, a license to marry within two years shall not be issued, was engrossed. On motion of Representative Cullop the bill to fix the state tax levy was referred to a committee of one. It provides that the school tax levy might be fixed at 13½ instead of 11 cents. The bill was referred to Mr. Cullop, who made the change. The bill is still pending on third reading.

Representative Sulzer's anti-Roby bill (the bill which proposes to wipe out the resort by having it declared a nuisance) came up on second reading. The bill was amended so as to provide that it shall not repeal the pool-selling act of 1881. On motion of Mr. Sulzer the constitutional rules were suspended and the bill passed.

MISS HUNT ALIVE.

The Report of Her Death is a Mistake.

She is at the Hope Hospital and Improving Slowly—The Other Injured—Casualties.

It was reported this morning that Miss Hunt, who was so seriously hurt in the Columbia City wreck, had died at the Hope hospital last night. A telephone message from the hospital this morning stated that the story was untrue. Miss Hunt is resting easy today and there are strong hopes of her recovery. She is constantly attended by a trained nurse. Her parents and relatives have been with her most of the time. His injuries consist of hurts about the head and back. Miss Hunt's home is in Hecla, Ind.

The other injured people at the hospitals are all improving. Engineer Knode, who was hurt in the Monroeville wreck, is also gaining, as is Mrs. Frank Higgins at her home on East Jefferson street.

OTHER CASUALTIES.

At 1 o'clock this morning a switchman named E. Such, employed at the east yards, had his hand crushed while making a coupling. He was taken to the St. Joe hospital. He will lose the index finger. Such's home is at No. 292 Harmer street.

E. F. Sigle, a laborer at the east shops of the Pittsburg, was struck over the right eye yesterday morning by a hammer, which rebounded from a loose piece of wood by the fall of a big chunk of iron. The gash in his forehead was stitched up by Dr. Stemen.

Albert Firks, an employe at the Hoffman lumber yards who resides at 151 Greeley street, fell beneath a lumber truck and his right hand was run over. Dr. C. B. Stemen amputated the index finger.

Elma Irey fell this morning while coming from school and fractured her collar bone.

ALSO A FORGER.

Young Holsinger Wanted at Kendallville for Forgery—Marshal Berhalter Arrived a Moment Too Late.

Marshal Clippinger, of Van Wert, returned to that city last evening, having in charge young Holsinger, who was arrested here yesterday.

The thief made no resistance and a requisition was not necessary. It now transpires that he stole the diamond pin from the Dixon house on Friday from a traveling man named R. H. Ratcliffe, of Cleveland, and brought it to this city, where he pawned it and then returned to Van Wert on Saturday for more plunder. Yesterday a few moments after he had been arrested by the Van Wert authorities Marshal James Berhalter, of Kendallville, came to town and said the prisoner was wanted in Kendallville on a charge of forging a check for $53. However, as the Van Wert officers had the first hold on him, Marshal Berhalter allowed them to take off the prisoner. To a SENTINEL representative the Kendallville marshal stated that the young man's right name was Holsinger and that he left his home in Kendallville on February 19th and until yesterday his whereabouts was unknown. His parents, who are highly respectable, are broken hearted. The cause of the young man's downfall is attributed to bad company. There is now little doubt but what Lynch and Holsinger are pals. Both will get long terms. Joseph Dixon, proprietor of the Dixon House, at Van Wert, stated last evening that every article which was stolen had been recovered, even to the gold pen holder.

LATER.

VAN WERT, Ohio, Feb. 28.—In Mayor Balyeat's court this morning William Halsinger, who was arrested in Fort Wayne Sunday night, was arraigned and pleaded guilty to the charge of grand larceny. A day or two before leaving Kendallville he forged a check for $53 and stole his mother's fine gold watch, valued at $50. A number of other such charges are hanging over him. The prisoner is now in jail, bound over to the circuit court.

A number of friends and relatives gathered at the home of W. S. Stair, of 13 Monroe street, last evening, to remind him of his forty-third birthday. The surprise was complete, and the guests spent a very pleasant evening. Mr. Stair received a number of very handsome presents.

At the recent meeting of the Morning Musical, the following officers were elected: President, Mrs. William H. Myers; vice president, Mrs. R. T. McDonald; recording secretary, Miss Fannie Winch; corresponding secretary, Miss Josephine Hartman; librarian, Miss Jane Ninde.

A social meeting of the Student's Art league will be held this evening at their rooms on East Lewis street. The program will be in charge of Misses Abbie Keegan, Luella Boles, Mrs. C. M. Dawson and Miss Madge Hamilton. Chocolate and wafers will be served.

William Kahoe and wife rejoice over a young son who arrived this morning.

BIG LAW SUITS.

Eliza and F. J. Hayden Sue the Fort Wayne Driving Club.

A Damage and a Divorce Case—Plaintiff Wins in the Branstrattor-Ellison Case.

Eliza J. Hayden and Fred J. Hayden, through their attorney, S. R. Alden, bring suit in the superior court against the Fort Wayne Driving club, and S. M. Foster, president, and H. C. Rockhill, treasurer, setting forth that the defendants have failed to comply with the agreement under which they purchased the lands east of the city now occupied and used by them for a driving park and praying for a reformation of the agreement so that the lands may be reconveyed to them and the title thereto quieted in the plaintiffs.

Charles Powers, through his attorneys, P. B. Colerick and Colerick & France, sues the Salimonie Natural Gas company in the superior court for $10,000 damages for injuries suffered by him while in the employ of the company. By an explosion he had his feet, body and head badly injured.

Vesey & Heaton, as attorneys for Isabella Reinhold, file a petition in the circuit court asking that their client may be divorced from her husband, Henry Reinhold, and praying that she may be given $1,000. She alleges cruelty and failure to provide. The defendant is a well-to-do farmer. The parties have been married two years.

Newton Murray and John Blankley were sent to jail by Judge O'Rourke for sixty days for larceny. Ollie Thompson, accused of assault, pleaded not guilty. Barton Lynch, who robbed Witte's saloon, was sent to the penitentiary for two years.

Geo. Wasson, who robbed Dan Cox's place, was bound over to court by Justice Ryan.

The jury in the Branstrattor-Ellison case returned a verdict this morning in the circuit court for the plaintiff.

Herman Sheyer and Minnie T. Strass have been licensed to wed.

The case of Frederick H. Myers against Henry Koch has been dismissed in the superior court.

Judgment against the plaintiff for $976.77 has been entered in the case of George Taylor against Edward Beckman, treasurer of Allen county. This is another of the cases involving the Huntington gravel road assessment.

The following new cases have been filed in the superior court: Gottlieb Brudi against Andrew J. Mills and others, suit to quiet title to real estate; M. V. B. Spencer, attorney. Noble county bank against Charles K. Taylor and others, notes, $150; Randall & Doughmann, attorneys for plaintiff.

Simon Bonebrake, of Huntington county, while riding on a traction engine, broke through a bridge and nearly half his bones were broken. He sued the county for damages and a jury awarded him $7,000. The court set aside the verdict and granted the county a new trial. A change of venue followed to Whitley county, and the second trial was had before Judge Dawson and jury. After the evidence for the plaintiff had been submitted, the defendant set up the plea that according to his own evidence Bonebrake was not entitled to damages, and Judge Dawson sustained the plea upon the ground that when he received his hurts he was traveling in an unusual and extraordinary manner. Bonebrake will appeal to the supreme court.

After two years' service as treasurer for the Fort Wayne Humane society, Dr. McOscar will tomorrow turn the books over to John Mohr, jr. The doctor does not believe in the policy of two administrations.

Sheriff Clausmeier is in Richmond today, having gone with an insane patient who has been at the Hope hospital for the past few days.

HERE'S a chance for the female emancipators of women to get up and assert themselves. The galleries of the English House of Commons, from time immemorial open to the fair sex, have been barred against them on the specious plea that the ladies have been misconducting themselves while occuping its vantage ground. This means the loss of a valuable position, ladies; if you can't get into the galleries you certainly can never hope to occupy the seats on the floor. Contest the point tooth and toe nail; it is your only hope and worth the fighting for.

A TELEGRAM announces that a woman somewhere in England swallowed a razor, to the serious inconvenience of her digestion. At first the act seems one of carelessness, but, in justice to the woman, it must be said that she first closed the razor.

OVERRUN WITH THIEVES.

Fort Wayne Again Suffers Numerous Small Robberies.

Two Boarding Houses Gone Through—Cash Stolen—Lakeside Also Visited.

Reports of burglaries are coming in from all quarters of the city. Saturday noon a well dressed young man, who said he was a barber, asked for lodging and dinner at Mrs. Powell's boarding house, over No. 22 Harrison street. Later in the day, when he had gone, George Riley, a boarder, missed a silver watch and a suit of underwear, and another boarder, named Frank Huss, missed a suit of clothes. The "barber" did not return.

Late last evening Sheriff Clausmeier and Deputy Melsching arrested one George Wassen, working at the Tenth ward sewer, upon suspicion of being the thief. He was taken to the jail, but Mrs. Powell, who saw him soon after, could not identify the man.

ANOTHER VICTIM.

On Saturday a suit of clothes was stolen from Fred Walke, who boards at Dan Cope's, on Barr street. A man called at Shubert's second hand store later in the day and tried to sell a suit or secure a loan, but the proprietor was suspicious. His boy, however, got a good look at the man and last night at the jail pointed out Wassen, who was arrested on suspicion of robbing Mrs. Powell's place. The case will be thoroughly investigated.

HIS CASH TAKEN.

Gust Eicher, who works for McDonald, Watt & Wilt and who boards at Mrs. James Jacobs' at the northwest corner of Lewis and Harrison streets, was robbed of $35 some time during Sunday morning. He went to bed at midnight Saturday night, but forgot to fasten the outside door and when he awoke Sunday morning $35 in bills were missing from his vest pocket and his trousers were lying out in the middle of the floor with the pockets turned wrong side out. He has no clue.

BURGLARS AT LAKESIDE.

Last night several attempts were made to break into houses in Lakeside by a gang of three men who operated on Columbia avenue.

Yesterday afternoon, between the hours of four and five, thieves entered the residence of Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Beahler, on Columbia avenue, at Lakeside, during the absence of the family. They turned things upside down from garret to cellar. Some silver and small change was taken from a purse, in all amounting to about $8. Mr. Beahler's clothing was scattered about the rooms in every direction. Entrance was effected by a back window. The burglar opened a number of drawers and some of them contained valuable silver plate, which he wisely left behind as the silver might lead to his detection. The money was all that was taken.

TERRIFIC STORM.

Eight Feet of Snow in Northern Michigan.

Trains Snowed Under and Traffic Suspended—The Worst Storm in History.

IRONWOOD, Mich., Feb. 28.—The very worst storm of the winter was as a June zephyr to a Dakota blizzard in comparison with the terrific storm that has raged here for the past thirty hours and which is still in progress. The snow is from three to eight feet deeper today than yesterday, and it is impossible to drive teams in the streets. All business is at a standstill. Lake Shore and Wisconsin Central trains from Milwaukee and Chicago are snowbound thirty miles south of here. A relief train with four engines and two coaches left here at 9 o'clock to attempt to reach the Lake Shore limited, which is snowed under near Manitowish, Wis., and take off the passengers and mails.

CRESWELL, Feb. 28.—A blizzard struck the northern part of Sanilac county yesterday afternoon, completely cutting off traffic. The train due here at 4:54 yesterday afternoon on the Sand Beach division of the Flint and Pierre Marquette road is stalled in five feet of snow near Minden. Six engines and two snow plows are working to get the train through.

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., Feb. 28.—The Grand Rapids and Indiana railroad has the worst blockade of the winter on its northern division. A terrific wind has filled the cuts with huge drifts of snow six to ten feet deep. The Mackinaw passenger train due here at 10:30 last night is stalled at Mancelona and the snow plow sent out to relieve the train is also stuck. The road for miles is impassable. Traffic is suspended, but no accidents have been reported.

Miss Yaw in Steinway Hall.

(New York Herald.)

Miss Ellen Beach Yaw appeared in Steinway hall last evening and showed herself to be possessed of not only an attractive face and pleasing stage presence, but a well cultivated soprano voice as well. She is entirely free from mannerisms and sings in a perfectly natural, straightforward manner, that is thoroughly refreshing in these days of artificial vocalism. 28-3

"Jay," the fine bred, white French poodle owned by O. L. Perry, strayed or was stolen from his owner's residence, No. 79 West DeWald street, this morning. As the owners name was on the dog's collar, it will be returned if it is so fortunate as to fall into honest hands.

SHE WAS SURPRISED.

So Will You be When You Read It.

It Certainly Has Been a Source of Wonder and Comment.

But the Lady is Ready to Substantiate Everything.

CHARLESTON, MASS.—There has been in this place much wonder and comment of late in regard to a certain lady—a Mrs. Agnes S. Morton, who resides at 38 Main street, Charleston, Mass. She was seen at her home and explained the whole interesting matter as follows:

"I do not know how to express myself to you and the public at large about this matter," she said, "but I feel it my bounden duty to say something.

"Everybody knows that I have been a great sufferer from dyspepsia for twenty-five years and that I tried most everything and different doctors, but all were failures. I became so weak that I was unable to walk steadily, had no appetite and what I did eat was the most simple kind of food; but my stomach was unable to retain even that.

"I could not sleep at night, had no ambition for anything, and was a total wreck. I knew I would have to do something as I could not stand it many weeks longer. Why I could not go up stairs without sitting down, and my heart would beat and I would be all of a tremble. I got a bottle of Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy and had taken scarcely one-half of it when I began to have an appetite and when I finished the remainder the trembling had left me, the palpitation was better and I could sleep nights. I took four bottles and then left off to see if the great benefit I had received was permanent, for everything I had taken before had proved only temporary.

MRS. AGNES S. MORTON.

"But I found that it was not so in this case. I have not taken it now for some time and its results are just as good as permanent.

"I must tell you I am like a new person. I have an excellent appetite, can eat anything and everything, and feel buoyant and ambitious.

"I cannot express half I want to and all this is perfectly true, as all my friends and acquaintances are knowing to all the facts.

"I never expected to be cured as my case had been of so long standing. I hoped for nothing more than relief for a while; but I am cured, perfectly cured. Yes, I do not hesitate to say that through the blessing of God and Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy I am completely cured."

Such is the lady's remarkable story and we doubt if such wonderful cures have ever before been made as are effected by this truly valuable discovery, Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy.

It is a fact that everybody needs a spring medicine, something to tone up and strengthen the nerves, invigorate the blood and start up a healthy action of the organs; and no medicine in the world so perfectly and completely does this as Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. It is the ideal spring invigorant and restorative.

All can secure its great benefits as it is for sale by druggists for $1. It is, too, a purely vegetable and harmless medicine, the prescription in fact of the well-known, successful specialist in nervous and chronic diseases, Dr. Greene, of 35 W. 14th street, New York, who can be consulted free of charge, personally or by letter.

WILL March come in like a lion or a lamb?

GAY society feels the restraint of the Lenten season.

THE snow king has been profuse with his gifts this winter.

OUR state legislators will come marching home next week.

OUR new city hall will soon be completed. It will be a beautiful edifice.

WASHINGTON will be thronged with visitors this week to witness the inauguration ceremonies.

THOUSANDS of office-seeking politicians have their lightning rods up, and every one is hoping that lightning will strike "his'n."

LET the streets and alleys of the city be given a thorough cleaning when the snow passes away, and then we will be prepared for the cholera if it does come.

WITHIN a week Mr. Cleveland will be sitting in the presidential chair again. Grover has been tried and the people know that he will give us a safe administration.

SPRING is supposed to commence March 22, when the sun reaches the vernal equinox. However, this event is rarely accompanied with real spring weather. But this year all indications point to an early spring.

IN many cities in New Jersey last Sunday regular church services were abandoned, and meetings were held denouncing the legislature for passing the law legalizing winter racing. Great indignation is manifested over it.

THE ice harvest is about over for this season, but the ice men are not grumbling a bit. Not for many years has the crop been as good. There have been no bad days since the season opened, and work has been steady and continuous. The ice has been far better this season than ever before, and the amount stored is large. Last year the ice was in no place more than twelve inches thick; this season it has ranged from fifteen to twenty-two inches.

ONLY a generation ago, when the civil war began, there were not more than one-third the number of post offices we have today, and the revenue was little more than a sixth of the amount now received. Then registered letters were almost unknown; now the registered packages and parcels which pass through the mails number 15,000,000 in the year. Then the money order system extended to less than 1,000 post offices, handling less than $1,000,000 per annum. Today there are 30,000 such offices, handling $140,000,000. A century ago there were about 2,000 pieces of mail matter handled per day; now there are 8,000 handled by the mails every minute of the year. Then there were not over 100 postoffices in the entire country, and the entire mail routes did not exceed 2,000 miles, bringing in a revenue of less than $50,000. Now the mails travel a distance equal to forty-one times the circumference of the globe each day, and more than one-half the offices of the country are supplied with daily mails. In 1860 there were but 27,000 miles of railroad used for carrying mails, at an expense of little over $3,000,000, with 600 employes; now the railway mail service is carried on 169,000 miles of road at a cost of $21,000,000, employing over 6,000 men, and they traveling 113,000,000 miles in crews each year, and distributing 7,900,000,000 pieces of mail matter, besides distributing nearly 16,000,000 of registered packages. This labor is performed with such care that less than one letter in 5,000 is mis-sent.

THE United States is the chief source of supply from which Germany draws the deficit in her domestic breadstuffs. Such is the information contained in a report to the state department by Frank H. Mason, consul at Frankfort, of the statistics of grain importation into Germany for the year 1892. They show an enormously increased volume of both wheat and rye imported from the United States. From fourth place in 1890 the United States rose to first place in 1892, the amount of wheat purchased from the United States rising from 1,902,772 bushels in 1890 to 23,065,793 bushels last year. The importations from the United States in 1892 were nearly one-half of the whole amount imported (46,509,719 bushels). The importations of rye from the United States increased from 765,833 bushels in 1890 to 4,984,325 bushels in 1892. Russia's contribution of that cereal to Germany, owing to failure of crops, decreased from 27,000,000 bushels in 1890 to 4,500,000 in 1892. Mr. Mason says the exhibit is interesting from the definite limit which it fixes to the capacity of British India and Australia as sources of supply. "Although Germany has regular steamship connection, under her own flag, and a growing export of manufactured goods with both India and Australia, they play a comparatively insignificant role in furnishing the foreign wheat that is required by this country."

Spectacled Cows.

A remarkable story comes all the way from Moravia to the effect that all the cows in that country are "humped" in the rail fence corners chewing their cuds with great blue spectacles fastened before their eyes. It seems that the ground in that country has been covered with snow since the latter part of October. Nearly every day has been clear and cold, the reflection of the sunlight from the snow being very disastrous to the eyes of both man and beast. Thousands of cattle went entirely blind before the attention of the government director of agriculture was called to the fact. That gentleman, Dr. Verincourt, recommended blue spectacle glasses set in wooden or wire frames, and the result is that thousands of cows are now roaming about over the Moravian pastures looking as dignified as Boston "schoolmarms." It is further said that the entire blue glass supply of Vienna has been exhausted and that the government has applied to Paris and London glass dealers for additional supplies.

"THERE was a time," says a downcast moralist, "when the fair fiancee, blushing and tremulous, whispered the secret only to her dearest friend, and the relatives on either hand, after decorous delay, carefully circulated the formal announcement among near friends. Now the wooer barely has time to get the knees of his trousers dusted before the story is blazoned forth at some great function, as Miss So-and-So's engagement was announced in the crush of the horse show. An English girl, triumphant at the consummation of her heart's desire, told all her friends at a fancy ball the glad tidings, with: 'I'm engaged to Lord Reggy; that is he—the big Mephistopheles over there. He proposed in the billiard-room an hour ago.'"

THE editor of an Oregon paper who has just been married prints in his paper the following notice: "We have for sale a little over half a box of 'bachelor buttons' that go through the cloth and fasten together on the same principle of a rivet in a harness tug. Among other things they are handy to fasten the perforated ends of suspenders to. Like other relics of our bachelor days, they are things of which we have more supply than demand. We conscientiously recommend them as being better than a nail on account of monopolizing less of the trousers and not drawing frost in the winter."

MODERN cutlers despair of reproducing the ancient sword blades of feudal Japan, as modern artificers in iron despair of imitating the artistic sword guards of that country. According to tradition the test of the ancient Japanese sword was even more rigid than that of Saladin's blades. It was enough if the latter would cut in twain at a single blow a down pillow, thrown in the air, but the Japanese blade, suspended horizontally beneath a tree, must sever any leaf that, falling, should accidentally light upon the edge of the weapon.

THEY have what are known as twenty-three cent restaurants in Paris. "Please bring me a napkin," said a customer in one of these basheries to the waiter recently. "Just now they are all in use," replied the waiter. "Please be patient; you shall have the first one available." "Then bring me a toothpick with which to kill time," said the customer. "Impossible!" exclaimed the waiter; "for the moment they also are in use."

GOV. FLOWER, of New York, liberated a woman the other day, named Polly Frisch, who was undergoing a life sentence for murder, and had been in prison for thirty-three years. In 1859 she poisoned her husband, a prosperous young farmer in Genesee county, N. Y., and their two children. She was convicted on her fourth trial and sentenced to be hanged, which sentence was afterwards commuted to life imprisonment.

A BOSTON girl has received royal honors in Berlin, because she is the bride of the Spanish ambassador there, and an ambassador is supposed to represent his sovereign personally. Senora Buendios, who enjoys this distinction, was a Miss Thorndyke.

Spring medicine and Hood's Sarsaparilla are synonymous terms, so popular is this great medicine at this season.

THE WIND'S TRIUMPH.

"Heigho! Heigho!" cried the flakes of snow,
As down from the sky they flew;
"On a moonlight night we're a pretty sight,
With the clouds above so blue."

"Heigho! Heigho!" cried the noisy hail.
"I can outrival you, snow!
I can turn your flakes into icy cakes.
If such is my will, you know."

"Heigho! Heigho!" cried the angry wind.
"You're too conceited to-day;"
So he blew a blast as he swiftly passed.
And swept them all away.

MISS DUNCAN'S PARTY.

Amanda is the only daughter of the late Jeremiah and Mehetabel Duncan. While she may no longer be classified as a society bud she is, at least in her own opinion, far from what is generally regarded as in the sere and yellow leaf of life. To maintain a show of youth "Mandy," as she is called, always gives a party early in the year. She believes in being both gay and happy, and seems to have adopted the sentiment of that old-time song, for she is constantly singing:

So let the world jog along as it will,
I'll be gay and happy still.

Mandy inherited quite a snug little fortune from her father's stepmother, for whom she was named, and lives with her cousin Jake Harrington, who with his wife and ten children, eight of whom are boys, occupy her old homestead that looks down through the window-lined bank of the western branch of the romantic and historic Susquehanna.

Tom Harrington, as soon as he heard that another party was to be held, began laying plans for having a good time. He called his brothers George, Dan, Bob and Jake together with Harry Green, Peter Conway, Joe Dawson and Ed Gilmore, into the large coach shed one afternoon and held a council for the purpose of arranging a number of parts that were not down on Mandy's program.

Tom and Bob Harrington, Joe Dawson and Peter Conway volunteered to decorate the large dining room with evergreens, and had spent two days in gathering laurel and making it up into garlands. They were very particular in hanging it up, and arranged the green-covered twine so that streamers ran from each corner and side of the room to the centre of the ceiling, where they joined a large balloon-shaped cluster that hung immediately over the centre of the extension table. Tom engineered the work and when it was completed he carefully attached a green pendant to the bottom of the balloon, so that it would almost reach the table.

The afternoon was a busy one to every member of the household, but to none more than the boys who worked with a vim. They made grotesque faces out of hollowed-out pumpkins, and with them illuminated the front porch. The company began to arrive early in the evening, and before 7 o'clock the orchestra from the village had tuned up their instruments and started the music, and old and young joined in an old-fashioned Virginia reel. Part followed part, and everything went on as merry as the celebrated wedding bells for nearly two hours.

Mandy is passionately fond of perfumery, a fact that was known and appreciated by the boys. She carries a bottle suspended on a small silver chain from a hook on her waistband. This suggested to Tom what proved to be the first part of his program of fun. He had purchased a bottle to match the one she always carried and had it partly filled with asafoetida at the drug store. He filled the bottle up with benzine, in which powdered up garlic had been steeped. After several attempts he managed to get possession of Mandy's bottle and placed his in its place. The exchange had not long been made before the hostess of the evening, taking out her lace handkerchief and almost saturating it with the contents of the bottle bathed her face and hands. Two minutes later the poor spinster began to be shunned by every one in the room except the boys who kept as close to her as they could, so as to see how she and the others took the joke.

She colored up, as Bob said, "just like a turkey gobbler and repeatedly smelled at the lace handkerchief. The room was warm and in a short time the pungent odor became almost unbearable. Mandy had to retire, but before she left the room one of the boys attracted her attention while Tom replaced her bottle. She had hardly disappeared before Tom had emptied the bottle of disagreeable mixture in the ash-pan under the parlor heater. Harry Green substituted pieces of amber, like shaving soap, for the fiddlers' rosin, with the result that the first time they attempted to rosin up the bows, the horse-hair became so slippery that the orchestra had to stop playing just as the chief cotillion of the evening was to start up.

The other boys were by no means inactive. Two of them had sneaked upstairs, and, crowding out of the dormer window upon the roof, stuffed a lot of old bagging in the chimney, then returned to the company as innocent-looking as could be. It was not long before the parlor had to be deserted. The benzine mixture among the ashes was ignited by a hot coal dropping from the grate and the room was filled with dense and odorous smoke. The party retired to the large sitting room on the opposite side of the hallway where the time was spent in playing games and in social chat. One of the guests suggested blind-man's buff and while the company were in the very height of that amusing and interesting game, the lights from some unknown cause, except to the boys, suddenly went out.

While the people were groping about in the darkness Ed Gilmore, who had concealed himself back of the heavy window curtains, where he had smeared a lot of phosphorous over his hands and donned a hideous-looking mask, stepped out from behind the casement and said in solemn tones: "I am Cæsar's ghost. Give me liberty or give me death, good, noble, valiant Antony. Come, let's back to Rome." He had hardly finished his recital before all the guests in the room were piled in a promiscuous heap and yelling for help and mercy. Fortunately for Ed the window shutters were open, and raising the sash he got outside during the consternation without being identified. He threw the mask away, and going to the pump washed the phosphorous from his hands.

After order had been restored everything went along nicely. The fiddlers, having removed the soap from their bows, were placed in position in the large bay window in the dining-room, where they played a thrilling march as the company marched in couples to the room. If Mandy prided herself upon anything more than another it was the supper she gave at her party.

The boys had sprinkled sifted sugar over the raw oysters and not a soul at the table swallowed a second bivalve. Every course of the supper had in some way been doctored. Sugar was substituted for salt in the individual cellars; rain water colored by steeping walnut hulls in it filled the vinegar cruits; powdered chalk had been sprinkled over the pound cake, and in place of the rich old port wine the young scamps had filled the bottles with sweetened water colored with red and black ink. The guests looked at each other in amazement every time an attempt was made to eat or dring anything that was on the table. Finally the dishes and their contents were removed and others of a commoner quality filled with more ordinary food were substituted and the meal proceeded with.

Everyone present but the boys was mystified, and seemed possessed of a dread lest something worse would happen. Parson Richards and his friend 'Squire Ambler of Berks county, who were present, soon had the company in the best of humor by their sallies of sparkling wit. The 'Squire sat directly opposite Mandy, and while congratulating her upon the artistic way in which the room was hung with the ropes of evergreens, reached over and took hold of the end that reached down from the central decoration, just what Tom Harrington had expected some one would do when he arranged it. As the 'squire held on to the evergreen, he asked the hostess to reach over and take hold of it from her side of the table, saying:

"I want to tell a little incident that took place when I was a young man. I attended a celebration near Reading, when the dining room was decorated very much as this one is. In the central figure was placed a hidden joy bell that was rung by a covered rope that hung down like this does." Mandy reached over the table and took hold of the evergreen, but the company never heard the 'squire's story, for as she took hold the 'squire and she gave a slight pull and down came the decorations, with nearly a hundred large Japanese torpedoes, which, as they fell upon the floor, table or people's heads, exploded with deafening reports.

As the decorations fell the 'squire in his consternation grabbed Mandy's arm and gave her such a pull that he drew her clear over the table and landed her in the parson's lap, with the pyramids of cake and fruit that were upon the table. The boys, according to Tom's instruction, kept a watch on the evergreens and, just as they saw Mandy take hold of the end that hung down, they got ready, and, as the things began to fall they extinguished the lights.

The screams and scenes which followed are indescribable. When order was again established nearly every person present was engaged in trying to remove the ice cream that had been upset upon them in the excitement. Strange as it may appear, the boys managed to carry out their parts without detection, and old Mrs. Goodman, the colored woman who had been employed to help with the cooking, declared: "Somebody gone an' hoodood dis house sure's yer born. Why, I'se nebber seed sich carryings on in all my life. Who of you's been doin' somethin' bad to Miss Mandy? Has you had any colored people 'round here of late? If yer has an' didn't treat 'em right dey's went an' done all dis yere trouble what you's had ter-night."

Joe Dawson left the house during the confusion, and, going to the pig pen, he threw a bag over one of the young shoats to keep it from squealing, carried it to the front porch and waited there till the company began to depart. The parson and the 'squire were the first to leave, and just as Mandy was bidding them good night at the front door Joe let the shoat from the bag, and with an ear-piercing squeal it ran against the 'squire, knocking him over, and then made its way itno the house, sending Mrs. Harrington into her husband's lap and smashing the rocking chair in which he was sitting. Before it was captured the shoat ran into the kitchen where it so frightened Aunty Goodman that she emptied a pan of dishwater into the range and was nearly suffocated by the steam and dust that arose from the fire.

The last heard of the boys they were congratulating each other on the success of their plans.—Philadelphia Times.

A WOOD RAT'S BIG NEST.

A Description of This Queer Article of Freight From Alaska.

For a queer and unusual article of freight a rat's nest can hardly be excelled, especially the nest of a wood rat that was built by those strange little animal architects in far-off Alaska, and which was shipped in a large freight car at the loading sheds lately for the Smithsonian Institute at Washington, says the San Francisco Examiner. Only one available car for the purpose could be found by Mr. Anthony, so large and cumbersome was the nest, it being approximately cone shaped, seven feet in height and with an irregular, broad base ten feet wide at one end and about six feet at the other. With its crate of light frame-work it weighed 980 pounds, and a big New York Central furniture car with wide doors and a high roof solved the problem that Mr. Anthony had been vexed with for a couple of days as to how he was going to send it East.

Of course, neither the wood-rat nor his nest is a very uncommon sight, but the one in question is, however, on account of its height and size, and, like many other nests of these rats, is a most interesting sight to many who have never seen one of them and a study to everybody for the intelligence and design displayed in its construction.

The nest at the first glance is apparently a huge pile of small branches, twigs, leaves and grasses imbedded in clay and hard, dry lumps in chunks of mud. The odor of dry grasses and dull, whitish mud or clay predominated, and on close inspection it could be seen that the little Alaskan rodents had evidently laid every twig and piece of wood and every branch of grass and leaves with a nicety and according to a well-defined plan that would cause the winds and rains and the storms to beat against it without avail. As is their practice, it has been built up against a number of small trees standing close together in a dense underbrush, and its sides were solid compact and waterproof.

At the narrow end of its base or foundation was a small opening or door into this tiny castle, where probably a couple of hundred rats were wont to make their home. It was no doubt big enough for that purpose, because the inside of the nest was filled with a large number of pouches or little rooms, each one leading from an opening and upon a rude climbing and winding stairway clear up to the apex of the nest. The pouches are all lined with soft grasses and leaves, and some of them had a lot of fur or hair in them, for these little animals often pull out their own fur to make warm beds for their young. They have been known to pull their fur from their bodies by the mouthful in order to fit up the pouches as snugly as possible for their young, and this had evidently been done by some of the rats that had occupied the nest in question, judging by the amount of fur in it.

Rats' nests not being down in the freight classification of the railroads, Mr. Stubbs, who the day before had classified the tiger, rhinoceros, tapir, cheetah, orang-outang and the forty-nine monkeys that recently arrived by steamer China en route to St. Louis for Barnum and Bailey's circus as "carload of race horses, with a maximum value of $100 for each animal and $50 for each monkey in case of death by derailment," puzzled his brain as to whether the nest should not be classified as a portable house. Mr. Stubbs has a portable house rate which would put a plumber's bill to shame, but even with a traffic official's license, which, like poetic license covers a multitude of inconsistencies or mistakes, he could not make a portable house out of the nest. So it was given a car all to itself at first-class freight rate.

LIFE IN A PIRATE SHIP.

The Dishonest Sailor Is Always Punished Very Severely.

The customs and regulations most commonly observed on board a buccaneer are worth noting, says the National Observer. Every pirate captain doubtless had his own set of rules, but there were certain traditional articles that seem to have been generally adopted. The captain had the state cabin, a double vote in elections, a double share of booty. On some vessels it was the captain who decided what direction to sail in, but this and other matters of moment were oftener settled by a vote of the company, the captain's vote counting for two. The officers had a share and a half or a share and a quarter of all plunder and the sailors one share each. Booty was divided with scrupulous care, and marooning was the penalty of attempting to defraud the general company, if only to the amount of a gold piece or a dollar. Every man had a full vote in every affair of importance.

Arms were always to be clean and fit for service, and desertion of the ship or quarters in battle was punished with death. On Roberts' ship a man who was crippled in battle received $800 out of the common stock, and a proportionate sum was awarded for lesser hurts. Lowther allowed £150 for the loss of a limb, and other captains instituted a sort of tariff on wounds, which extended to ears, fingers and toes. In chase or battle the captain's power was absolute. He who first spied a sail, if she proved to be a prize, was entitled to the best pair of pistols on board her over and above his dividend. These pistols were greatly coveted, and a pair would sell for as much as £30 from one pirate to another. In their own commonwealth the pirates are reported to have been severe upon the point of honor, and among Roberts' crew it was the practice to slit the ears or nose of any sailor found guilty of robbing his fellows.

Such feeble interest as now attaches to what was once the formidable fame of the pirates is not even esthetic; it is merely comic. No imaginative essayist discusses piracy as a fine art; but Paul Jones is resurrected as the hero of a musical burlesque. Poor Paul! And he is almost the only one of the whole buccaneering race whose story discovers a trace of the legendary gallantry of piracy. Paul, whose father had been head gardener to Lord Selkirk, plundered the Selkirk mansion of its plate, which he subsequently returned in a parcel to Lady Selkirk with a letter of polite apology.

No Songs Like the Old Songs.

Life is full of surprises and disappointments. At an Omaha hotel one Sunday a number of gentlemen, strangers to each other, drifted together by the force of circumstances, engaged in discussion of music to while away the time. One of them was a pale, thoughtful man, with the air of a student; another was a fat man with bristling whiskers, who might have been a veterinary surgeon. "I tell you," said the fat man, "there are no songs like the old songs; they are the sweetest and the best; they linger in one's memory like the scent of the roses about the broken vase, and that they give rise to emotions that cannot be called into life by any of the new songs. Take for instance Annie——"

"Rooney?" broke in the pale, thoughtful man in a sweet, birdlike voice, and then a great hush fell upon the assemblage, and the fat man, with a long, lingering look of scorn at the interrupter, repaired to his own room to bury his sorrow.—Omaha World-Herald.

SPOUTING LIKE A WHALE.

A Big Cunarder, Damaged in a Collision Has a Spouter Built.

The two new Cunard Atlantic liners will be nearly as long as the Great Eastern. Apropros of this subject, Mr. William Cunard, the head of the company that bears his name, referred the other day to the 'pioneering period of transatlantic steaming, when the system was necessarily in a more tentative stage, and related an anecdote of the ingenuity of one of the ship's carpenters in those early days.

One of the boats came into collision and her bow was smashed in. A bulkhead was put in at the nearest landing place to keep the water out of the ship. Then the ship carpenter put up, connecting with the damaged portion of the vessel, a capacious chimney, and Mr. Cunard asked what on earth that was for. "Oh, that's for her to blow," was the reply.

"Sure enough," added the relator of this story, "experience showed that he was right, for directly they got to sea and the waves washed through the damaged bows, air and water spurted from the chimney just as from a spouting whale, and probably they would not have got safe through their voyage but for the carpenter's foresight."

RAILWAYS AND SHOPS.

The Missouri Pacific Accused of Cutting Rates.

Incidents of Daily Occurrence About the Railroads and Shops of This Busy City.

A dispatch received from St. Louis this morning says: "Chairman Caldwell, of the Western Passenger association, has sent out circulars to the various lines interested to the effect that one of the members of the association had violated the agreement, and in connection with the Ohio and Mississippi and the Baltimore and Ohio roads, had cut the rate from Kansas City to Washington and return. The cut was made for the inauguration and it was intimated that the Missouri Pacific was the offending line. The officials of the Missouri Pacific deny the allegation and say regular rates have been maintained. It is not expected that any rate war will result."

THREW HIMSELF IN FRONT OF THE ENGINE.

A man, supposed to be Jack Morrisey, committed suicide at Lima, Ohio, yesterday morning by throwing himself in front of a moving freight train. The train was the fourth section of No. 73 west bound; the engine, No. 186, in charge of Engineer John Pearson and Fireman E. R. Richey. The man was walking in the same direction as the train, on the south track used by east bound trains, and stepped over to the north track, down which the freight was coming, and when the engine was within a few feet of where he was standing, he threw himself forward, falling across the rails on his stomach The pilot caught his body, dragged it along the rails until it struck an obstacle in the shape of a switch frog, when it was forced under the pilot and a second later the life of the man was crushed out. The affair took place so quick that it was all over before the train, although it was going at a very slow rate of speed, could be stopped, and nine cars passed over his body. The right leg was cut off close up to the hip, and when found lay between the rails near the frog, while the mangled trunk occupied a position, face downward, about two car lengths further along. The left leg was also mashed. The flesh was quivering when the trainmen reached the body, which gave several convulsive jerks and it was all over.

Chocked—the progress of Consumption. It's cured, too, if it's taken in time. What is needed is the one unfailing remedy for Scrofula in all its forms—for one of those forms (Lung-scrofula) is Consumption.

Purify your blood—that's the first thing. Rid it of the taints and poisons that make it easy for this dreaded disease to fasten its hold. Then if you haven't delayed too long, you can be cured.

From beginning to end, the remedy is Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It's the most potent blood-cleanser, strength-restorer, and flesh-builder known to medical science. Consumption, and every form of Scrofula and blood-taint, all yield to it. For Weak Lungs, Spitting of Blood, Bronchitis, Asthma, and all severe, lingering Coughs, it's an unequaled remedy—and the only one for the Blood and Lungs that's guaranteed. If it doesn't benefit or cure, in every case, you have your money back.

THE HOOPSKIRT INVASION

Must Cross the Ocean Before It Reaches Us.

The newspaper discussion, the public agitation and the action of state legislatures, and notably Senator Boord's bill on the hoopskirt question are regarded as premature. The style is on the other side of the Atlantic as yet. It must have a season over there, be sent to the American shores and gradually work its way westward. It will be at least another twelve months, it is thought, before the hoopskirt will have invaded this portion of the country. Six months ago Worth, the Paris dressmaker, said that fashion would not be allowed to take up the hoopskirt this year. But other authorities on women's dress place the hoopskirt on the market and are pushing it anyhow. There are believed to be no factories in this country turning out hoops now. If there are they are making no effort to sell them to the dry goods houses. A few of the hoops have appeared in New York, but they were brought over from the other side by women who wanted to change from the styles which are now followed by everybody. But importers have not been offering any for sale on the New York or other eastern markets. It is believed that when the style does become prevalent in will be carried to extremes, as the tendency of the American woman is not to half follow the fashion. It would not surprise the dealers if the hoops were so large that two women wearing them would be unable to pass on a sidewalk of ordinary width.

HAVE ANIMALS A LANGUAGE?

Not Understood, But Science Inclines to Believe That It Exists.

It used to be told in the fairy stale that the hero could hear the grass grow and speak with the animals. In reality it is not likely that we shall ever develop the sense of hearing sufficiently to hear the grass grow, but it is quite likely that we shall be able to converse with the beasts of the fields. But, do the beasts have a language? He would be bold, indeed, who would deny it point blank. We observe all around us too many indications of conscious communication between them to have a right to say "no" absolutely. To be sure some animals are silent, totally, it seems. But may they not convey their "thoughts" in some way, for instance, as the deaf-mutes do? Or may they not use a secret language, one like that of lovers, employing gestures and looks? When we speak of language in this connection it must be understood that we do not mean articulate speech. We take the word in its broadest sense as an expression for the means of mental communication existing between one creature and another. A sound or gesture made by an animal under any mental or emotional impression, and calling out a similar one in another animal, is an element of language. When the rabbit (Lepus cuniculus) quickly beats the ground its fellow rabbits know that there is danger somewhere and they take action accordingly. That is rabbit language. When the hunter imitates the rabbit and thus conveys the same ideas, he is "speaking" the rabbit language for the time being. Many animals use signs, which of course are understood through the eyes. The ants converse by touching antennæ and feet; many insects rub the elytra. This is animal language in its simplest form. It expresses but few ideas. But there are animals which are capable of modulating their "voices." Even the common rabbits, which seem to be mute, are constantly making sounds, which a little observation will soon discover to be ever changing in volume, modulation, etc. Much of this method of communication changes when the animal is brought into civilization from the wild state. The wild dog, for instance, barks very little when in freedom. How the household dog barks and is able to express himself is well known. It has been observed that if the tamed dog is taken back to the wild state he loses his voice. These "sounding voices" are produced in the animal throat in a way similar to human language, but are not "voices" proper, nor "languages" proper, and yet they are full of psychological expression and reveal the animal's psychic states. If we tickle a chimpanzee in the armpit the touch produces a grin on the face similar to that of a man under like circumstances; he also emits laughter-like sounds. The same is the case with the orang-outang. The gorilla knits the brow when angry, just like men. We often observe in apes a complete change in the facial muscles when something is going to happen, be it agreeable or disagreeable. It is also with the child. In the apes there is evidently the same connection between the facial muscles and vocal muscles as in man.

If animals are able to express every idea they have why not allow them a language? To be sure, a very undeveloped language, yet relatively no further from civilization than that of Pesheran, which in European ears sounds like animal screams and yells. Bechstein has noted that the chaffinch expresses a joyous emotion by a single sharp "Fink," and anger by "Fink—Fink—Fink!" sorrow and sympathy by "Trif—Trif." Houzeau has found that the common hen has at least ten distinct sounds well understood by the chickens. Rengger observed that the long tailed cebus of South America expressed astonishment by a sound between whistling and screeching, impatience by repeating "hu! hu!" and that he had a peculiar scream for pain or fear. Darwin thought he observed ten distinct sounds in the same ape, all of which called forth corresponding states of mind in other apes. Brehm says the same. However, why quote the learned? We have all, in everyday life, observed something similar. Dr. Garner's experiments in the Simian language are also known. One must, however, guard against the belief that monkeys possess an articulated language. About some savages it can hardly be said that they possess an articulate language. The Bushmen speak in a sort of articulated "voicing," and must add gestures to make themselves understood. On the other hand, the raven, the thrush, the mocking-bird, the starling, etc., express themselves in well-articulated sounds. The parrots articulate in a surprising manner, though they do not understand the meaning of their own words. This shows that other living beings beside man possess the necessary organs for articulated sounds. The apes of Dr. Garner seem to possess articulation, according to his reports, but their vocabulary is extremely limited. As regards this point, however, it can be said that, even among civilized peoples, very limited vocabularies are found. A French peasant, whose sphere of thought is not very wide, gets along with 600 words, while a philosopher will use twenty times as many. The Old Testament only uses 5,642 words; Shakspere 15,000, and Voltaire 20,000. In view of this, why should an ape not be satisfied with twenty? Garner's experiments must needs be verified by many anatomical and physiological examinations, for Broca has, as it seems, proved absolutely that articulated language depends upon certain convolutions of the brain, particularly on the left side of the head. Do the speaking monkeys possess those convolutions? Broca has admitted the possible rudiments of such convolutions in certain apes, but later researches have not proved their existence in lower apes. Whatever may be the outcome of Garner's reported trip to the land of the gorillas, science must remain indebted to him for his discoveries and the opening up of new fields on the subject of animal language.—Illustrated Family Magazine.

Sailors Fear Bridal Couples.

A gentleman who has recently returned from Europe tells of an odd superstition in vogue among the more ignorant classes of seamen. They are of the opinion that the presence of a young couple on their bridal tour aboard ship portends a violent storm. The Canadian, an Inman steamer, had a young couple aboard, and sure enough the ship was caught in a hurricane. A number of the sailors were intent upon throwing them overboard and only the courage of the captain, who opposed the mutineers with a revolver in each hand, saved the lives of those who were enjoying the first weeks of their honeymoon.—Cincinnati Commercial Gazette.

It Was the Landlord's Only Luxury, but the Drummer Refused It.

Hotel keepin' pay?"

"Well, yes, sorter. Heap er trouble 'tached to it though."

"Drummers perticklar?"

"Yes, dem 'em, they be."

The landlord of the Southern hotel bit viciously into a twist of homespun tobacco.

"No, they don't kick 'bout the price, but ther always a-wantin' somethin' extra though. Now, that chap et come in on the ten-thirty last night kicked cos he couldn't get a room to hisself with a stove in it. Said the fire in the fireplace burned his shins while his back was freezin'.

"He kept me en Sam on the trot for an hour, en then couldn't satisfy him. He jest sat in a chair and cust like a pirut.

"Sam fotched him his coffee.

"'Cup er koker, please; I can't drink coffee,' says he, sorter snappin' like.

"'Termorer's our koker day,' says I. 'Try some poke en co'n bread; it's powerful good these cold mornin's.'

"'Thanks,' says he, but he didn't tech 'em.

"'Let me have a couple er rolls en er cup er tea,' says he ter Sam.

"'Either will do,' says he.

"'Haint got enny,' says Sam.

"'Gimme the other kind, then,' says he.

"'Haint got enny of that either, boss.'

"'Well, the rolls en a glass er water.'

"Whad I charge him?

"Dollarn quartah for bed an' breakfast." And with a sigh for man's inhumanity to man the landlord arose from his split-bottomed chair and sauntered to the depot to meet the noon train.—N. Y. Herald.

THE PHONOPHORE.

The Sending of Simultaneous Messages on One Wire.

To be told that a telegraph wire which is busily transmitting a long message can at the same time be made to convey half a dozen other messages in opposite directions sounds like a fairy tale, but that the thing has been done and is daily being done is attested upon the most respectable authority. The discovery which renders these astonishing results possible is due to C. Langdon-Davies, who has for some years been engaged in rendering it practically workable and in adapting it alike to telephonic and telgraphic use.

It is difficult to convey to the lay mind an accurate comprehension of a process so exceedingly technical; but it may briefly be said that Langdon-Davies in the "phonophore" utilizes not the electric current but the noise caused by induction. The signals are transmitted by a series of induced electric impulse, and the success of the system is found in the ability of the inductive force to pass through insulations which electric currents can not penetrate. A wire may be blown down and in contact with the earth, yet so long as it is not broken it will carry a phonophoric message.

By means of the phonophore messages can be transmitted with extraordinary rapidity, and there is practically no limit to the number of messages that can be sent simultaneously upon the same wire. And, as we hinted, Mr. Langdon-Davies' system is as useful telephonically as it is telegraphically. A wire which is conveying electric signals can at the same time be used for telephonic conversation without either the message or the conversation suffering in the least.

For some considerable time past experiments in both directions have been proceeding with most gratifying results, which are vouched for by such high authorities as Prof. Sylvanus Thompson, Conrad Cooke and Latimer Clark. Three of the principal railway companies have already adopted the phonophore, and it must be obvious, even to the unscientific mind, that phonophoric telegraphy and telephony, which so vastly increased the electrician's power over the wires, has before it a very great future.

The phonophore, indeed, increases almost to infinity the number of words that can be transmitted in a given time. It is obvious, therefore, that it opens great possibilities in the way of cheapening the cost of telegrams. So long as the number of words that could be carried by a wire in an hour was rigidly limited it was hopeless to look for any substantial reduction in the cost of telegraphing, but the phonophore at once increases the capacity and speed of every wire to which it may be fitted.

Sharpening Knives.

The itinerant knife-sharpener is not a good man to trust with a finely-tempered or really good knife. His father used to carry round a good supply of water, and with this he kept his wheel wet, so that it could not possibly heat or destroy the temper of the knife. That this is necessary can be testified to by anyone who has tried to sharpen a knife on a stone without either water or oil to moisten it; and the farmer would never dream of rubbing his scythe with a dry whetstone. But the modern itinerant knife-sharpener does not use water at all. He sharpens the knife on the dry stone, and by means of a little rubbing he gets a feather edge which has every appearance of sharpness, but which breaks off the first time the knife is used, leaving a ragged edge much worse than before the muddler took hold of it. To sharpen a knife properly it is necessary to keep the stone wet all the time, and any arguments to the contrary are the result of a desire to save trouble and time.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Artificial Porous Stones.

One of the most interesting points in connection with the new water works of Worms, Germany, is the fact that artificial porous stones are used for filtering the water. Tests showed that the number of bacteria in the water after filtration is about one-twentieth of that before filtration. Steam pipes are so arranged that the stones can be sterilized whenever it is necessary.

Notes of Science.

Three quarters of a second is the time occupied by the fall of a knife in the guillotine. The knife is weighted by 120 pounds of lead, falls nine feet, and cuts through flesh and bone as easily as through a bar of soap.

Divers in the clear waters of the tropical seas find that fish of different colors, when frightened, do not all dart in the same direction, but that each different kind takes shelter in that portion of the submarine growth nearest to its color.

The production of bituminous coal in the United States is now double that of anthracite. In 1892 there were 110,000,000 tons of bituminous coal mined, against 52,000,000 tons of anthracite. The area of production of soft coal is ten times greater than the area of production of hard coal. In the form of coke, bituminous coal is constantly encroaching upon the field of anthractic production.

"Brace Up"

Is a tantalizing admonition to those who at this season feel all tired out, weak, without appetite and discouraged. But the way in which Hood's Sarsaparilla builds up the tired frame and gives a good appetite, is wonderful. So we say, "Take Hood's and it will brace you up."

For a general family cathartic we confidently recommend Hood's Pills.

An Injunction.

There are two kinds the courts tell you—a temporary and a permanent injunction. A temporary injunction gives relief for a time only, but when you take Simmons Liver Regulator for Dyspepsia, and find yourself cured, that means a permanent injunction. It's the same when taking the Regulator for Malaria, and all affections of the liver and kidneys.

A few days ago some one played a mean trick on George Karringer, of this city. He drove his horse out in the country some three miles on the Goshen road for a load of wood. The animal was not a Maud S, but Mr. Karringer met with a farmer who seemed willing to trade. A bargain was struck, the horses exchanged and Mr. Karringer started home with his new animal. K. OF P. ENCAMPMENT.

Arrangements for the Washington Meeting—The Ritual Question.

James R. Carnahan, commander-in-chief of the uniform rank, Knights of Pythias, of the world, has returned to Indianapolis. He has been in Washington making arrangements for the session of the supreme lodge, which meets there in August, 1894. He says that at a meeting of the executive committee of the Washington lodges they pledged $10,000 to entertain the visiting knights. This fund is separate from the money to be raised by the citizens' committee. That committee proposes to raise $40,000 to pay the prizes and prepare the camp for the uniformed knights. The indications are that there will be about 25,000 uniformed men in camp. While on his trip he visited the grand lodges of Maryland, New Jersey, District of Columbia, Virginia, Rhode Island, North Carolina and Massachusetts. All of them, he says, have begun to map out their plans for the supreme lodge meeting. The executive committee will have another meeting March 28.

"Did you make any inquiry concerning the feeling of the German lodges on the new ritual?"

"Yes, I did. The question was before the grand lodges of the states I have mentioned, and all of them decided to do away with the German ritual and do their ritualistic work in the English language. They hold that this is an English-speaking nation, and the order should conform to the usages of the country. It is asserted by some that there are in the German lodges of this country about 75,000 members. This is not true. The total membership is not more than 11,000."

THE PREPARATIONS

That are Being Made for the Inaugural Ball.

Various Minor Notes Pertaining to Social Affairs in Local Circles.

It is expected that 12,000 people will attend the inaugural ball. For the building of the temporary kitchen to be annexed to the pension office $1,700 will be spent. The supper will be furnished by a Washington caterer, John Crohan, who was recommended by Mr. Wanamaker. He is to get $1 for each supper ticket sold. He is guaranteed $3,500, but he must provide for 7,000 suppers—the remainder at his own risk. Four years ago the supper was prepared by a Philadelphia hotel keeper. He was guaranteed $6,000 and took in $6,400. The people who eat at this national festival are usually hungry. It is estimated that they will devour 65,000 oysters—20,000 of them raw—500 gallons of soup, 8,000 chicken croquettes, 7,000 sandwiches, 300 gallons of chicken salad, 150 gallons of lobster salad, 300 gallons of terrapin, 150 boned turkeys, 300 quarts of Roman punch, 800 pounds of pate de fois gras, 1,300 quarts of ice cream and water ices, and 7,000 quarts of cream and milk. The guests will, it is expected, consume 400 pounds of coffee, which will be drawn from 100 gallon copper tanks.

To serve all these viands 200 waiters will be required. They will all be colored men hired in Washington. Four years ago a part of the help was imported from Philadelphia. One man will do nothing but look out for accidents and brakeages. If a clumsy menial should chance to spill a pint of ice cream over some unfortunate person's dress coat, this attendant will mop up as much of the muss as possible. If a lady upsets in her lap her quota of lobster salad he will be on hand to help and console. On these occasions the rush of the hungry at the buffet is always so great as to make the serving of food difficult. This, however, will be mitigated by waiters who will stand at intervals along the outside of the gobbling line, receiving filled plates from other servants at the buffet, and passing them on. To hold and carry the edibles and drinkables provided 20,000 pieces of china will be required. After the ball is over it will take twenty-five women three days to wash all the things.

Some things are to be done at this inauguration which have never been attempted on a similar occasion hitherto. Pennsylvania avenue is to be brilliantly illuminated for one hour all the way from the capitol to Washington circle. At the same time the capitol and the treasury will be ablaze with revolving suns. There will be twenty such suns for the capitol and ten for the treasury.

OLD DICK.

He Was Rough in the Barn-Yard, But a Beauty in Harness.

"I had an old horse—Dick," said Billy Blanchard to a Globe-Democrat man, "who was the very devil in the barn-yard. No better horse in harness. Once git him in the shafts and he was all right. But to git him there wasn't so much fun some times. 'Twas no use to git mad about it. In one month I think I hired about fourteen men to come out from town and work my garden and take care of the horse and cow. Frequently they'd stay two or three days, but oftener they'd go back to town to rest a day. I nearly went broke buying railroad tickets and new clothes for the men.

"A fellow would come out from town and proceed to do the night's work; go in the stall with Dick to clean out his manger, bend over the board, and in two shakes of a sheep's tail lose his breeches or his roundabout and be dinged glad to get out of the stable alive. I remember one Sunday morning going into the stable yard to help Kate, the cook, harness up. Kate seduced Dick with sugar and sweetmeats of all kinds. He had a sweet tooth. But that morning nothing would touch him, and the prospect of gittin' my wife to church was particuarly poor.

"Kate played her last card on him with some maple sugar, and while he was licking his chops, got the bridle and harness on, and had led him out of the stable. He utterly refused the shafts. Kate called me. As soon as I got in the yard he made for me, his ears laid back, his teeth all skinned and his eyes looking like the devil. I ran for a pig-nut tree in the yard and dodged him for a few moments. There was a stack of bean poles not far off. I made a dart for it, gathered the nearest one and wheeled just in time to give him a fearful swipe on the snout as he came at me. The blow took all the starch out of him. He turned at once and walked over to the carriage. I followed him, carrying the pole. He was done. I held the pole and Kate hitched up. I kept the old devil nearly two years, and I was the only person that could do any thing with him outside the shafts. Finally I sold him for a dray horse."

AN English judge ruled that if a person applies the term liar where he deems it fitting, a slight blow in retaliation is justifiable. This decision is too ambiguous to serve as a safe guide to those who would scorn to indulge in any retaliation not wholly legal. What might be a slight blow to a pugilist could knock another and a better man into his long home. And supposing the person called a liar really is one?

HOMES IN MOURNING.

Death of Wm. F. Winkelmeyer, the Well Known Liveryman.

The Sad and Silent Work of the Reaper in Other Homes in the City.

This morning about 4 o'clock, at his home, No. 81 West Jefferson street, occurred the death from dropsy of William F. Winkelmeyer, of the livery firm of Winkelmeyer Bros.

His illness dates back to over two years ago, since which time, with the exception of a few months last summer, he has been confined to his home and his bed, being a great sufferer from the disease with which he was afflicted and which at last resulted in his death.

Mr. Winkelmeyer was born in Germany in 1849 and came to this country when he was seventeen years old, settling with his parents in this city. He first secured employment with Meyer Bros. and afterwards worked at Storey's foundry, which is now the Fort Wayne iron works. With his brother Henry he then engaged in the livery and hack business on West Main street and continued a member of the firm until his death, although during the last few years, by reason of his illness, he has been unable to attend to its business.

He was married in 1879 to Miss Sophia Lankenau, who, with two children, girls of eleven and six years of age respectively, survive him, as does also his father, Henry Winkelmeyer, Sr., who is now seventy-one years old, and his brothers and sisters, Henry and Chas. Winkelmeyer, Mrs. Fred Kolthoff and Mrs. Chas. Salomon.

He was a member of the Emanuel Lutheran church and had a large circle of friends, among whom he was highly esteemed for his social disposition and business qualifications,

His disease, from which he has suffered so much during the last few years, was one that baffled physicians to cure, and for this reason a post mortem examination is being held this afternoon.

Scheumann & Klaehn, the undertakers, have charge of the remains, and they say the funeral will probably take place from the residence and the Emanuel Lutheran church on Thursday afternoon, Rev. C. Gross officiating.

News reached this city yesterday of the death at Baltimore, Ohio, of Mrs. Lydia Weller, a sister of Saul, John and George Soliday, of this city. George and probably Saul Soliday will leave this evening for Baltimore to attend the funeral.

Mr. and Mrs. F. C. Cratsley are at Toledo to attend the funeral of Mrs. Hull, Mrs Cratsley's mother.
